

McGrath Family YMCA Passes Final Inspection, Opens Doors to Public

The new 35,000 square-foot, $8 million McGrath Family YMCA in Rancho San Diego passed final inspections in April and opened its doors to people looking to pursue their health and fitness. San Diego County's Department of Planning and Land Use (DPLU) issued the facility its Certificate of Occupancy in time for its grand opening April 8. The two-story fitness center includes a gymnasium, child care center, multi-purpose room, two exercise rooms, a "mind-body" room, ball fields and a basketball court. The Building Division started working with the East County YMCA in October 2008 on the project, conducting 95 inspections to ensure the facility was safe for the public.
